

32ND SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

A poor widow also came and put in two small coins worth a few cents. Calling his disciples to himself, he said to them, "Amen, I say to you, this poor widow put in more than all the other contributors to the treasury." - Mk 12:42-43

Pope Francis recently release the encyclical Dilexit Nos, which in English means “He loved us.”

This encyclical highlights the Sacred Heart of Jesus and God’s love for us. As I began to read the document, I couldn’t help but let out more than one, “yes!” along the way. Why? Because it gets to the heart of the matter.

The heart of the matter is the heart; Jesus’ Sacred Heart and our hearts. When we say the word heart, we do not mean the physical organ that beats in our chest. Biblically speaking, the heart means the core of the person. It denotes a person’s center for emotional, intellectual and moral activity. When you are making a difficult decision, it’s not just your brain at work, but your heart.

When we use the expression “change of heart,” we’re not talking about someone undergoing an actual heart transplant. We are, however, talking about something internal going on inside a person that truly affects change, especially a change in how someone views the world and how someone views their own life and the lives of others.

In this way, Jesus truly is a physician; a Divine Physician. He is all about the transformation of hearts.

FR. BOB’S WEEKLY BLOG

Folks complain today about the abundance of weapons on our streets and in our homes, especially guns. There certainly needs to be serious discussion amongst leaders about violence in our culture, but at the same time, we must go even deeper and have an honest look at the role the human heart plays in being the source of violence.

When someone intentionally shoots another person, the actual physical weapon is nothing more than an extension of a sick heart. The gun becomes the delivery vehicle of a troubled heart. Sadly, the gun gets blamed, and we too often ignore the heart of the issue.

The Pope’s letter invites us to discover or rediscover the spiritual importance of the human heart. We must attend to the heart and nurture our hearts. To neglect the condition of our hearts is not a good idea. Jesus plays a significant role in heart health. He provides the grace we need, but we must do our part to receive it and cooperate with it.

The Church has not lost sight of the human heart, but much of our consumer/producer, noisy, stay busy, rat race culture has lost heart. The Sacred Heart of Jesus can help.

Grateful, Thankful, & Blessed

Each year in Autumn, our parish school board presents Grateful, Thankful & Blessed.

This event serves as a wonderful get-together that also helps raise money for our school. This year’s event takes place on Saturday, November 16. The evening is open to parishioners and school families.

The doors of European Chalet open at 6 PM. There will be dinner, live entertainment, raffles, silent auctions, and original student art.

A lot of work by the St. Symphorosa School Advisory Board goes into this event. We are truly grateful, thankful and blessed for their volunteering above and beyond to make an event like this a reality for our people.

Two Holy Martyrs Parish supports and will continue to support Catholic school education. We invite all our parishioners to be ambassadors of the school by helping spread the word that St. Symphorosa School offers a quality grade school education while also attending to the formation of our children. We want to be the school of choice in the Midway area.

Please consider buying a ticket or two and enjoying a wonderful evening for a good cause. If you are not able to attend the event on Nov. 16, please consider a donation to the school.

Thank you for supporting our parish and our parish school.

Quote -- “Let us love because that is what our hearts were made for.” -- St. Therese of Lisieux

FR. KEVIN'S GREGORIAN RANTS

We declare our almighty God as the creator of heaven and earth, affirming him as both the source and sustainer of all that exists. When we talk about creation as Catholics, we use the Latin term creatio ex nihilo, which means that God created from nothing. I often get asked by our school kids, "Who created God?" The answer? No one – God has always existed and will always exist. That's a part of the definition of being God as the first cause and the prime mover.

Unlike humans, God is able to make something from nothing. Human beings are capable of creation, but we need to material, including ourselves, from which to create out of. I can build a beautiful and comfortable chair, but I need the wood, the nails, the tools, etc. By saying God created matter out of nothing, we mean just that. God speaks and it comes into existence, even space and time. He does so freely, not out of necessity or loneliness, and purposefully, not leaving anything to chance.

There are two creation accounts in Genesis. The first, Genesis 1, speaks of how God ordered the world and declared it to be good. Because there is order in the world, we know things have a purpose and we can observe the universe in order to understand it. It puts humanity as the pinnacle of creation as the only creatures made in God's image and likeness. We are created for relationship, for love, and for holiness, and from this imago Dei we have great and unassailable dignity. By declaring what he creates as good, he eliminates the idea that the physical world is evil.

The second creation story, Genesis 2, speaks of his intimacy and relationship with humanity and the complementarity of men and women. God didn't create a universe and then leave it to get by on itself, but remains present and active in guiding, upholding, and sustaining. Human beings are a composite of a body and a soul, as we hear that God breathed his own divine life into the clay.

When it comes to creation, we can be quick to dismiss the Genesis accounts because they don't seem to match with our scientific discoveries. It's important that we don't read the Bible as some natural science textbook, but an account of the origin of deep truths meant to reveal God to us and aid us in our salvation. Catholics are not religious fundamentalists. We don't believe that the world was created in seven literal days, nor do we reject theories of evolution or the Big Bang just because they don't explicitly appear in scripture.

For example, when it comes to evolution, a Catholic is able to accept and uphold the theory without risking faith or being at odds with revealed truth. Evolution seeks to explain the history, diversity, and relationships of all living things with respect to each other. Pope Pius addressed it in 1950 in his encyclical Humani Generis, and it was reaffirmed in 1996 by Pope St. John Paul II.

They stated the official Church position was neither full acceptance nor rejection, but rather that it was allowed as long as certain truths were maintained. First, that God initiated the process orderly and purposefully. Second, God provided souls to the first human beings once the evolutionary process resulted in the bodies that would become humans. Third, that God is guiding the process; it is not purely accidental.

The creation of the world was an act of complete gift and love by God. Not only did he create the visible universe, but also the supernatural, invisible, and spiritual world. Every part of creation speaks to some aspect of who God is. As St. Paul writes to the Romans, "Ever since the creation of the world his invisible nature, namely, his eternal power and deity, has been clearly perceived in the things that have been made." (Rom 1:20). No part of creation is accidental or unwanted. We take up the responsibility of being God's stewards of creation, upholding our calling and dignity given to us from the beginning.
